St. Mary Magdalen Parish Celebrates Black Catholic Month

Norman Francis

(1931 - present)

Norman Christopher Francis was the first Black law student at Loyola University in New Orleans and later become president of Xavier University, our nation's only historically Black and Catholic university. Francis was born on March 30, 1931, in Lafayette, Louisiana, and moved to New Orleans in 1948. Francis and his siblings attended Catholic schools and Mass every Sunday. He credits his parents — neither of whom finished high school — for teaching him "how to live, to respect people, how to make a living and to always remember who you are." At age 18, he entered Xavier University of Louisiana (XLIA) on a work scholarship. He was elected President of his class for all four years, earning his B.S. in 1952, after which he became the first African American to enter Loyola University. He received his law degree in 1955.

He quickly renounced the practice of law when he realized that "the future belongs to those who are educated.' In 1957, Francis was appointed Dean of Men at XULA, and it was in this role that he boldly welcomed the Freedom Riders on their stop in New Orleans after segregationists had just bombed their bus in Alabama. He recalled his conversation at the time with Xavier's then-president, telling Sister Kenney, "'No room at the tim?' We're a Catholic school. We've got to open the dorm.' And we did."

He became XULA's president himself in 1968, just after Dr. Martin Luther King Jr's assassination. During his 47-year tenure as president, Francis guided Xavier's growth both in size and dimension. Throughout his presidency, the University more than doubled its enrollment, broadened its curriculum, expanded its campus, strengthened its financial base, and enhanced its tradition of academic excellence. During these decades he also worked as a civil rights lawyer, focusing on getting young Black men and women out of jail.

"People haven't really dealt yet with racism. In the sense that each would respect the other, we're not there yet."

Servant of God Thea Bowman

(1937 - 1990)

Sister Thea Bowman, FSPA, was a religious sister, college professor, liturgist, and nationally-renowned public speaker who challenged the Catholic Church to welcome the beauty and necessity of Black culture across the United States and Africa, using her glorious singing voice to engage her audiences.

Thea Bowman grew up in a prosperous family in Canton, Mississippi, the only child of a medical doctor and a teacher. When she was small, four Franciscan Sisters opened a school there; they so impressed her that at age nine, she converted to Catholicism, and at fifteen she left to join their order in La Crosse, Wisconsin, where she was the only Black Sister. Her charismatic nature overcame the prejudice of some of the Sisters, and her order eventually sent her to American University in Washington to earn a Ph.D. in English literature. Throughout the 1960s, Sister Thea was a popular English professor at Viterbo College, but was eventually sent home to Canton to care for her aging parents, at which point the Bishop of Jackson, Mississippi, commissioned her to create and lead a new Office of Intercultural Ministry.

In this role, Sister Thea traveled all over the U.S., giving presentations that combined singing, gospel preaching, prayer, and storytelling, which she continued long after being diagnosed with cancer in 1984. She taught that Black Catholic worship was every bit as valid and Catholic as white-centered worship. She published Lead Me, Guide Me, the first specifically Black Catholic hymnal. Shortly before she died, she was the keynote speaker at the U.S. Conference of Bishops, where she had all the bishops hold hands and sing "We Shall Overcome." They endorsed her cause for sainthood on November 14, 2018.

"I'm content to do my little bit. Sometimes people think they have to do big things in order to make change. But if each person would light a candle, we'd have a tremendous light."

Maud Green

(1935 - 2021)

Maud Pearson Green was an educator, mentor, and philanthropist. A biochemist by training, she retired as the acting principal of Lowell High School in San Francisco. She also founded several scholar-ship funds for needy students and mentored many of the youth of her parish, St. Columba of Oakland.

Green was the youngest of 13 children born to Peter and Elizabeth Pearson in Norfolk, Virginia. She moved to the Bay Area to study biochemistry, and upon graduation she became a lab technician at Children's Hospital. It was there that she realized that her true calling was to be a teacher, and so she returned to U.C. Berkeley for a master's degree in education. She became a beloved science teacher at McAteer High School, and later on the Vice Principal, and finally, acting Principal of Lowell High School.

She met her husband, Bill Green, when they were both teachers in San Francisco. Both converts to the Catholic faith, they lived in El Cerrito and eventually became members of St. Columba, where she soon became a pillar of the parish, volunteering in the Health Cabinet and in women's groups. She was also a Eucharistic Minister and Lector at Mass. At her death, the church established a scholarship in her name.

Green was a member of many organizations, including the local chapter of the AKA sorority, Alpha Nu Omega. She was also a master gardener; her dear friend Bea Morgan recalled that all she needed to do was to show her a leaf from a feeble plant, and "Maud would be able to look at the leaf and tell you what you needed to buy. The next thing I knew, she would be at my house with the right product."

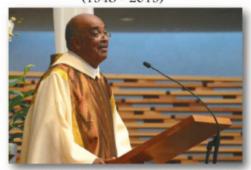

Two of her former students, Stacey Horton and Debra Blanchard, memorialized Green with these words:
"While the lemon picking, mint snipping, succulent and vegetable harvesting in her earthly garden may end, her prized crop of students that blossomed into family will perennially bear fruit enriched by her soil."

Rev. Fr. Jay Matthews

(1948 - 2019)

The Very Reverend Jay Matthews was the first Black priest to be ordained in Northern California, and was serving as Rector of Cathedral of Christ the Light at the time of his death.

Father James Vernon Matthews, Jr., affectionately known as "Father Jay," was born in Berkeley and raised in East Oakland in the same parish that he would later lead for more than 25 years, St. Benedict. After graduating from Skyline High School, he entered the seminary in Menlo Park, where he earned his B.A. and M.A.; he later studied at GTU in Berkeley and at the Gregorian University in Rome. In 1974, he became the first African American to be ordained to the priesthood in Northern California.

Father Jay became a nationally known figure in the Black Catholic community and a bright light in the Diocese of Oakland, where he served for decades, also as the Parochial Administrator of Our Lady of Lourdes Parish and finally as Rector of our Cathedral. He also proudly served as the chaplain to the Oakland police and fire departments and as vicar and spiritual director of Black Catholics. In 2014, the Oakland City Council designated May 6th as "Father Jay Mattheas Day."

His sudden death of a heart attack in March 2019 was mourned by people all over the state of California and across the United States. On the occasion of Father Jay's passing, our Bishop wrote that "Father Matthews' infectious love for his faith, his parishioners and his community was a source of joy and inspiration" for him. In the words of Matthews' dear friend, Fr. Jayson Landeza, who succeeded him as pastor of St. Benedict parish, as well as chaplain for the Oakland police and fire departments:

"To give generously, lovingly and unconditionally, and to do that with a sense of service - that was Jay."

Recent Reads

Here are a couple of books I've read recently that I recommend: Robert Rubin's The Yellow Pad and Ann Patchett's Tom Lake. One is non-fiction while the other is an excellent novel.

Robert Rubin was Secretary of the Treasury under President Clinton in the 1990's. While there is nothing groundbreaking here, Rubin's advice to write out positive and negative aspects of a decision is a helpful reminder. Much of the book reminisces about choices he and the rest of Clinton's cabinet had to make. He points out how, that after methodical examination, some decisions are no-brainers, while others are high risk with little chance of a positive outcome. Near the end of the book, Rubin notes

Among the essential promises America stands for is that together we can make better decisions when confronting the greatest social, economic, and national security challenges of our time. The United States has often fallen far short of delivering on that promise. But I believe it's done a better job than any great power in world history.... Furthermore, I think that while it would be irrational to be overly confident about the future of our country, society or planet, it would also be irrational to despair. "We're doomed!" is, among other things, an overconfident view.

This is an eminently readable book. I don't agree with all Rubin's politics, but he has a lot to say about calm, rational, decision making in difficult times.

Ann Patchett is always a fluid writer. While Tom Lake is a fairly predictable coming-of-age story, Patchett's telling of it is creative. Tom Lake, by the way, isn't a person but a fictitious lake where a theatre festival was held.

The protagonist, Lara, and her family own a cherry orchard in northern Michigan. The pandemic is raging, and they are unable to assemble a field crew to pick their crop. To keep her daughters occupied while they engage in the monotonous and strenuous task of cherry-picking, Lara recounts her brush with movie stardom, dating a famous actor and her eventual marriage to their father who directed the two in summer stock.

Patchett's character development is always spot-on. In addition, she adds enough plot details to enable me to envision her settings without getting in the way of the story. This is the third novel I've read by Ann Patchett, and I look forward to her next offering.
